

ABSTRACT

A method of cutting a plastic functional film, in particular a protective film, which has been applied to a hard substrate, such as a glass sheet. The film is cut using an ultrasound cutting device having characteristics and parameters selected such that a cut is only made through the thickness of the functional film, leaving the underlying substrate intact.